*EDMONTON
INCINERATOR*

I'm extremely concerned about the plans to redevelop Edmonton Incinerator and believe a pause and a rethink is badly needed.

I have been requesting a Value for Money (VfM) review of the project, especially as costs have spiralled from the original estimates of £650 million to £1.2 billion, and I believe it would be irresponsible to proceed without further evaluating this leap in costs and whether there is a more cost effective solution.

There should be a pause to review the evidence and concerns raised in an open letter by NHS doctors which brings to attention the risk to health this rebuild poses to local residents. A study from the British Heart Foundation found that Waltham Forest, downwind from the incinerator, has the second highest PM 2.5 concentration of all boroughs in the country and we are extremely concerned about the threat this poses to all residents and in particular those with existing respiratory conditions.
